PRIVACY RESPONSIBILITY

Wisconsin’s Department of Health Services (DHS) ForwardHealth program is committed to protecting the privacy of your medical information. Your privacy is already protected under ForwardHealth and Wisconsin law. In addition, federal law now requires health plans, such as Medicaid, to protect your medical information and to let you know how your medical information may be used and released to others. This notice tells you what ForwardHealth may do with your medical information and what your privacy rights are under the law. Medical information described in this notice may include information about you that appears on enrollment, claims, or other records used to make decisions about your health care services.

If you are in an HMO or other managed care plan you may get a privacy notice from them describing their privacy policies, as well.

ForwardHealth Privacy responsibilities include:

- Protecting the privacy of any medical information created or received about you.
- Sending you this notice describing ForwardHealth’s medical information privacy policies and the legal reason for those policies.

- Using or sharing medical information only as described in this notice.
- Sending you a new notice, if ForwardHealth privacy policies change.

WHEN YOUR MEDICAL INFORMATION MAY NOT BE USED

ForwardHealth will not use or disclose your medical information for any reason other than those described on page 2 of this notice, without your written authorization. You may withdraw an authorization at anytime by submitting a completed request form to the address listed in the “To Use Your Rights” section of this document. If you withdraw your authorization, ForwardHealth will no longer be able to use or disclose health information about you for those purposes covered by your written authorization. If authorization is withdrawn, ForwardHealth will be unable to take back any previous disclosures made with your authorization. In the event of an emergency, information may be released without your permission if, medically, it is in your best interest. You will be told as soon as possible after the information is released.

HOW YOUR MEDICAL INFORMATION IS USED OR DISCLOSED WITHOUT WRITTEN PERMISSION

Your medical information may be used or disclosed for treatment, payment, and health care operations, without your written permission. For examples of these functions, see below. Some services are provided through contracts with other state agencies or private companies. Some or all of your information may be disclosed, without written permission, to the other agency or company so they can do the job we have asked them to do. The other agency or company must also keep your information confidential.

Not all types of uses and releases are listed in this notice. Following are some common ways medical information is used or disclosed without written permission for treatment, payment, and health care operations. For each category we will explain what we mean and give an example.

Treatment – Medical information may be used or disclosed to make sure that needed medical treatment is received. For example, your medical information may be given to a pharmacist when you need a prescription filled.

Payment – Your medical information may be used and disclosed to others to bill and collect payment for the treatment and services you received. Medical information may also be shared with other government programs such as Worker’s Compensation, Medicare, or private insurance to manage your benefits and payments. For example, your doctor sends a claim form to ForwardHealth for payment. This claim form includes information identifying you, your diagnosis, and treatment.

Health Care Operations – Medical information may be used or disclosed in order to carry out necessary benefit or service related activities. For example, these activities may include quality and cost improvement functions such as conducting or arranging for medical review, quality improvement studies, audit services, management, or general administration.

Other ways your medical information may be used or disclosed without written permission include:

Informing You – Your information may be used in order to let you know about health and wellbeing services. Examples of this may include contacting you for appointment reminders, telling you about treatment alternatives or giving you information about health related benefits or services.

Public Health – Information may be reported to a public health authority or other appropriate government authority authorized by law to collect or receive information to help prevent or control disease, injury, disability, infection exposure, and child abuse or family violence. The authorities could include local, state or federal governmental agencies. For example, your medical information may be shared if you are exposed to a communicable disease or may otherwise be at risk of contracting or spreading a disease.

Health Oversight Activities – Information may be shared with other government agencies to provide oversight of the health care system. Examples of this include licensing and inspecting of medical facilities, audits or other proceedings related to oversight of the health care system.

Coroners, Medical Examiners, or Funeral Directors – Your medical information may be released to a medical examiner, coroner, or funeral director as needed to carry out duties authorized by law. For example, this may be necessary to identify a deceased person.

For Organ Donations – If you are an organ donor, information may be given to the organization that finds or transplants organs for the purpose of an organ transplantation or donation.

Worker’s Compensation – Your information may be disclosed to comply with Worker’s Compensation or similar laws.

Public Safety – Your information may be disclosed to prevent or lessen a serious threat to your health or safety, to another person, or the general public.

Specialized Government Functions – Your information may be used or disclosed to the government for specialized government functions. For example, your information may be disclosed to the appropriate military authorities if you are or have been a member of the U.S. armed forces.

Law Enforcement – Your information may be disclosed to fulfill a requirement by law or law enforcement agencies. As an example, medical information may be used to identify or locate a missing person.

Court or Other Hearings – Your information may be disclosed to comply with a court order.

Required by Law – In addition to the ways listed above in which your medical information may be disclosed, ForwardHealth may share your information when required by law.
