Day services

Definition and purpose

Day services are the provision of regularly scheduled activities in a non-residential setting. This can include assistance with acquisition, retention, or improvement in self-help, socialization, and adaptive skills that enhance social development. Day services can also help the participant develop skills in performing routine daily activities and participating fully in their communities. Activities and environments are designed to build positive social behavior, interpersonal competence, greater independence, and personal choice.

Day services enable the participant to attain or maintain their maximum potential and are coordinated with any needed therapies, such as physical, occupational, or speech therapy.

For participants with degenerative conditions, day service activities may include training and supports to maintain skills and functioning and slow regression, rather than acquiring new skills or improving existing skills.

Day services may also be used to provide retirement activities. As some participants get older, they may no longer desire to work and may need supports to assist them in meaningful retirement activities in their communities.

Day services must be provided in a variety of settings in the community outside the participant's residence. Day services may take place in stores, restaurants, libraries, parks, recreational facilities, community centers, or any other place in the community.

Transportation may be provided between a participant's place of residence and the site of day service activities or between day service activities sites (in cases where the participant receives day services in more than one place) as a component part of day services activities.

Personal care or assistance may be a component part of day services, as necessary to meet the need of participants, but may not comprise the entirety of the service. Participants who receive day services may also receive education and supported employment.

Exclusions

Day services may not provide for the payment of services that are vocational in nature (that is, for the primary purpose of producing goods or performing services). Day services may only be funded through the ILSP when otherwise not available through Medicaid, Medicare, or under another service category.
